Explanatory Note.

(This Note is not part of the regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport).

Under the existing law, the addition to food of certain dangerous metallic compounds as colouring matter is prohibited, but there are no provisions regulating their presence in food as a result of contamination. These regulations prohibit entirely the presence of certain dangerous metals and their compounds, and prescribe safe maximum concentrations for certain other dangerous metals and their compounds the presence of which in small quantities is in practice unavoidable.

COUNCIL CHAMBER,

Explanatory Note.

The purpose of these regulations is to bring the Colony's regulations relating to the use of colouring matter in food into line with the new United Kingdom Colouring Matter in Food Regulations, 1957, (Statutory Instruments, 1957, No. 1066).

2. Hitherto, it has been permissible to use in food any colouring matter except those specified in Part II of the First Schedule to the Preservatives in Food Regulations (Volume X, page 11). Under these regulations, no colouring matter may be used unless it is included in the prescribed list of permitted colouring matters. The list of permitted colouring matters follows in detail the list contained in the United Kingdom legislation, subject to the addition in Part II of the First Schedule of gardenia augusta which is a favourite and harmless local colouring matter of vegetable origin.

3. In view of the substantial changes made by these regulations, it is considered reasonable that persons having stocks of food containing colouring matter not hitherto prohibited or of the colouring matter itself should have a reasonable opportunity of disposing of their stocks. Regulation 7 provides that these regulations shall not apply to such food or colouring matter, or to such food or colouring matter which comes into the possession of any person within sixty days of their commencement, for a period of three years, provided that the existing law is complied with in respect thereof.
