IMPROVEMENT WORK STARTS IN MAGAZINE GAP ROAD

Expected To Take 8 Months To Complete

Work has started on the widening of the lower hairpin bend on Magazine Gap Road in the section between May Road and Bowen Road.

This follows the completion of the upper hairpin bend at its junction with May Road.

The work involves the widening of the carriageway to 22 feet and enlarging the radius of the road curve so as to provide an easier bend.

To achieve this improvement, it is necessary to construct a retaining wall on the steep slope below the road and to remove rocks on the hillside.

The existing road at this location is already restricted in width and the need to provide space for working and the erection of blasting screens will leave sufficient space for only single lane traffic.

Traffic control signals are being provided in the area but some delays and inconvenience to motorists are unavoidable during the course of the construction work, a spokesman of the Public Works Department said today (Wednesday).

The work is expected to take about eight months to complete.
